

Panama City Sends Postcards to Visitors, Reminder that City will Rebuild

Panama City, FL – November 20, 2018 – While Panama City continues to rebuild from the destruction of Hurricane Michael, the city has not forgotten about its faithful visitors from around the world. Destination Panama City, the official marketing organization for the city, is offering to send a “Postcard from Panama City” to serve as a reminder of the picturesque community embraced by St. Andrews Bay.

To request a postcard, visit destinationpanamacity.com. Postcards can be requested for yourself or sent with a custom message to a friend or loved one. Those who receive a postcard will also be the first to be invited to return to the city when its ready for visitors.

“We are proud that people from all over the world have fallen in love with our community and we can’t wait to welcome them back when we are fully recovered,” says Jennifer Vigil, Destination Panama City president and CEO. “We believe Panama City will rebuild bigger, better and stronger, but in the meantime, we want to send a postcard to keep Panama City on the minds and in the hearts of those who miss us.”

ABOUT PANAMA CITY

Embraced by beautiful St. Andrews Bay, Northwest Florida’s Panama City offers ideal conditions for world-class sailing, year-round in-shore and off-shore fishing and a myriad of water sports. Nearby Shell Island, an uninhabited barrier island with beautiful white sand beaches, features dolphin excursions.
